Cragun's

Merrill (Sr.) and Louise Cragun commenced construction of the first 8 cabins and a lodge in 1940. In 75 years Cragun's Resort has become one of the largest year round, popular vacation destinations in Minnesota. It had everything for a vacation with many attractions for its guest from boating, tennis and swimming to snowmobiling and ice fishing - but golf course green fees were purchased from nearby courses with diminishing availability.

In March of 1997, Dutch and Irma Cragun made a commitment to establish the highest quality world class golf complex possible. This new adventure for Dutch and Irma is now called the Legacy Courses at Cragun's. Fulfilling one of their main goals, they joined the International Audubon Society and won their highest honor: Audubon Signature Sanctuary Status.

Robert Trent Jones II, the "father of environmental golf", was hired as architect, mindful of the concept and criteria of the International Audubon Society. "Bobby" Jones and staff designed a masterpiece of golf architecture respecting forests, wetlands and wildlife. They created a Natural Resource Management Plan (NRMP), which addresses wildlife conservation, habitat enhancement, and water quality monitoring with a minimal movement of land during construction in addition built 1,400 feet of bridges over wetlands.

Construction on the first 18 holes began on August 6, 1997, with the first round of golf played after Labor Day. 1000 lucky golfer's were allowed to play September and October 1998 as "Preview Players."

The summer of 1999 was the first full season of play for the "Reversible" Par 3 (18 holes) and 18 holes of the "Dutch Legacy", named since the game of "colf" originated in Holland in the thirteenth century. "colf" was played on frozen canals, then on roadways between taverns by groups of 8 to 12 players using wooden balls covered by leather. Early paintings show that the Dutch taught the Scots the game while shipping herring to Scotland. Fellowship over "colf" is evidenced by Holland and Scotland having the same coat of arms and the fact that they are the only European nations not to have been at war with one another.

Construction of the world-class Club House began during the winter months of 1999 and was completed in May of 2000 and completion of the 2nd Championship Course (Bobby's Legacy) was in mid-Summer of 2002. Surrounding Lake Stephens and returning to the club house on the second nine, it offers the most challenging and beautiful views of the lake.

We hope that you enjoy the "Legacy Course at Cragun's" and that it will give pleasure for generations to come.
